

35 Years of Growth and Change at Abby's House

On June 7, 1976, Abby's House opened its doors to homeless and abused women, with or without children, for temporary, emergency shelter. Thus began an amazing journey that through the years, transformed Abby's into a multipurpose organization offering a variety of services to women in central MA. Abby's today is one home with four buildings, where on any given day, you experience not only the painful realities of women who are abused, homeless, or mistreated but are witness to their courage and resiliency. Despite everything they have been through, the women of Abby's have hope.

WOMEN'S STORIES

A New City, A New Life

In life, you come across a few people who make you feel totally at ease, like you've known them forever even though you've just met them; that's my experience with Maureen. You can find "Mo" in the dining room chatting with housemates over morning coffee or sitting in a quiet spot with her head buried in the most recent mystery novel she borrowed from Annette. With her spunk and sense of humor, you'd never guess the hardships she has seen, and once you know, you are amazed by her strength, resilience, and positive attitude.

Maureen shares the story of her journey.

All her life, Maureen has been struggling with addiction. When she finally made the decision to get clean she wanted to stay in Boston, where she is from originally. Unfortunately, she was unable to join a local recovery program. As a last resort, Maureen found a program in Central MA. At first she regretted her choice because she felt isolated, having no transportation and living far from her friends and family, but she ended up being very successful and after 6 months, Maureen was ready to move on to a residential program.

This is just a short list of accomplishments Abby's House and its staff, guests, and volunteers have made possible. In the words of Darleen Gadt, published author and longtime member of Abby's House Women's Center, "About twenty years ago I was a struggling sister who arrived...and I have been a part of the struggles since, a member of the sisterhood and I've seen Abby's grow."

To paraphrase the words of founder, Annette Rafferty, Abby's is the same, yet so very different than it was 35 years ago. Perhaps life was much simpler in 1976. The staff and volunteers at Abby's have become much more than shelter providers; they are landlords, supportive service providers, fund raisers, and public relation experts; but most importantly, they are dreamers, creators, and believers in the power of women and community. Maybe next year, or in 5 years, or in another 35 years, homelessness will be a thing of the past. Until then, we will continue drawing inspiration from Abby Kelley Foster and our mission, providing shelter, housing, and advocacy to each woman who walks through our doors. *

Recent Events

Abby's hosted its inaugural vintage fashion show, Reciprocal Style, on Thursday, March 24 at Ralph's Diner. The sold-out event was attended by more than 150 people and raised more than $10,000 — what a huge success! This evening benefit featured shopping, hors d'oeuvres, cocktails, raffle items and of course, a fashion show, showcasing vintage items from the Abby's House Thrift Shop! Proceeds from this event and sales at the Thrift Shop are used to run the Abby's House shelter, which serves hundreds homeless women and children from across Central Massachusetts each year.

Jodi Salerno, Thrift Shop Manager, said, "The response to Reciprocal Style was overwhelming. It was amazing having such an incredible group of women come together for Abby's. As individuals we choose to express and present ourselves a certain way — it is these choices that make us who we are. Abby's House too is unique. There's no place like it and it was important to me to get that point across with this event. Reciprocal Style is a reminder to ourselves of how important we are to each other as individuals and a community."

LOOKING AT THE ISSUES:

Homelessness Still an Issue for Women and Children in Central MA

Homelessness among women is often misunderstood due to the lack of visibility of homeless women and their children on city streets. You will not see them panhandling with their children. Instead, they are "couch surfing" at friends' or families' residences or living in cars and shelters. Ana, one of our most recent shelter guests, can attest to that fact: "If it wasn't for Abby's" she said, "I probably would have froze in my car this winter."

The data for homeless families in Massachusetts is startling. The income cutoff to be considered very low income in the state of Massachusetts is $37,150; however, the average income for a single mother with two children in Massachusetts is $20,400. It is no wonder women are forced to choose between basic necessities for themselves and their children.

With the economy in recession, women and children in Central MA are even more affected by homelessness. On any given day, the Abby's House Shelter Advocate receives up to 19 phone calls from women who are looking for housing. However, in light of the increased length of stay at our shelter (from an average of 11 nights to 27 nights) there are times when we do not have a bed available and must help the woman find another place to stay. Sometimes, this search ends up with the woman "couch-surfing" for another night, week, or month.

In addition to an increase in demand, Abby's House has seen a change in the population we serve. There has been an increase in women age 55 and older who are losing homes due to foreclosure, layoffs, domestic violence, and divorces, women in their 20s who have aged out of the foster care system, and in the working poor, who can no longer afford market rents. We have adapted our programming to meet the needs of these diverse populations, but until more affordable housing units and shelter beds are available for women and children, homelessness will continue to be an issue.

Until that day, our doors will remain open for women and children searching for a place to call their own. ✨

Like so many people out of work, Maureen struggled to find a job due to the economy and transportation restrictions. How would she afford to leave the program to start her new life? Maureen and the program staff became very frustrated that she was still there. They told her if she couldn't find a job, she would have to go elsewhere.

Fortunately, Maureen met someone in her recovery program who knew about Abby's House. A few weeks later she walked through our doors, and met with our Shelter Advocate, Parlee. As fate would have it, the day that Maureen was accepted into the Shelter she also received a job as a Telemarketer. Two weeks later, she moved from the shelter into one of our long-term housing units at 52 High Street. Since then Maureen has lost her job due to layoffs. She continues to live at Abby's House, where she feels at home and no longer in transition. She continues to look for employment in the Medical Reception and Administration field. Till then, she continues to brighten Abby's House with her charm and warm spirit. *
